THE PRINCIPLES OF PROTECTION.

When the principles on which Protection is founded are clearly defined there will not be much difficulty in determining the character of any measure having that object in view that may be proposed. Protection must be extended to every American industry that promises to supply any national want. The rule must be held to extend to raw materials as well as to finished products. There can be no such thing as products which are deserving of Protection and others that are not deserving. One American industry cannot be subordinated to another American industry.

There is no intelligible principle on which the American woolen manufacturer is entitled to protec tion while the grower of wool must face the competition of the wide reaches of Australia and the almost illimitable prairies of the Argentine Republic. No valid reason can be assigned why the refiners of sugar should be favored and the growers of sugar cast aside. No argument worthy of the name can be put together to show why the manufacturers of leather in any form should be protected against the cheaper workers of the Old World, while the cattlemen are left defenseless. A Tariff founded on any such notions as these would not be entitled to be considered a system, it would develop a set of pampered industries at the expense of the others.

If raw wool, raw sugar and hides should be free, then coal, iron, wheat and barley should be free. There is no escaping from the logic of this statement. It follows that any measure which leaves out any American industry, for any reason or no reason, does not reach to the full height of the Protective principle. There is an illigitimate strain of Free Trade in it, which must, in time, work its overthrow. Representative McKenna, in his report already referred to, stated the exact economic truth when he said that in Protection all must stand or fall together. There can be no such thing as Protection plus Free Trade. There is no room for any composite system. None can be constructed that can possibly be enduring. If there is to be Free Trade in any raw material produced in this country and subject to foreign competition now, there will have to be Free Trade in all of them in the course of time. When that point is reached Protection for manufactures will become very difficult. Parties who are clamorous for breaches here and tiring all three of the Stars. Pryce neutralized. The general result so played well at first, in fact all of the far has been the cheapening of the Hawaiis are to be credited with play- article to the consumer in the ing a very good game, and to some United States. There is no allegathey are rather below than above the mark. There are cases in which a large measure of protection might be extended.

But for the breaks observable in fly in fine style and had to doff his one or two instances, the bill hat. J. Perry did some good batting. drafted by the Committee of Ways and Means might be regarded as there was a tie. The Stars went in very complete, and the best that could be framed under the circumstances. The point for Republicans to consider is that Protection is to be viewed as a comprehensive whole, and not specially in detail-No scheme of Protection which does injustice in any quarter is going to be long-lived. Any breach that may be made will be sure to widen.-[S. F. Bulletin, April 23.]
